CRAFUND ADVISORS IS NOW COMMUNITY CAPITAL MANAGEMENT

New Name Represents Manager's Community-Based Investment Style

FT. LAUDERDALE, FL – February 1, 2007 – CRAFund Advisors, Inc. has changed its name to Community Capital Management, Inc. to better reflect the focus of its unique, community-based investment approach. The Ft. Lauderdale, Florida-based investment manager, founded in 1998, has become one of the nation's largest fixed income money managers focused exclusively on securities that finance community development activities. Since inception, through institutional clients' separate accounts and through the mutual fund it manages, The CRA Qualified Investment Fund (CRAIX), Community Capital Management has directed the purchase of at least $2 billion worth of bonds that have financed hundreds of thousands of affordable housing units, supported affordable healthcare, contributed to environmental restoration, and helped spur job creation and job training among other community and economic development activities.

“After nearly a decade working with banks to direct investment dollars to underserved communities and produce competitive returns, we're now expanding our focus to include mission-based investors such as foundations, faith-based organizations, pension funds, and other investors who seek an investment style that aims to deliver positive social impact and competitive returns,” said David K. Downes, Chief Executive Officer of Community Capital Management. “As we broaden our focus, these organizations will recognize that is exactly what we deliver. Hopefully, that means more capital will make its way to the communities that need it most.”

Recently, communities and families across New Mexico benefited from Community Capital Management's investment on behalf of its clients in bonds that are financing the state's HERO (Home Equity Required Occupation) Program, which funds affordable mortgage programs and down payment assistance for households in which at least one member is a police officer, nurse, teacher, firefighter, or an active member of the armed forces.

Community Capital Management's previous name, CRAFund Advisors, was based on its $725-million flagship mutual fund, the CRA Qualified Investment Fund, which is comprised of bonds that meet federal banking agencies' guidelines as “qualified investments” under the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA). More than 300 financial institutions, including mega-banks such as Citibank, Wells Fargo and Washington Mutual own shares in the Fund, in part, because these companies may earn CRA credit as a result of the community development impact of the Fund's investments. Individual investors may also purchase shares in the Fund through several mutual fund platforms including those offered by Charles Schwab, TD Ameritrade, and Fidelity.
